So, you downloaded and installed the iTunes (<https://www.idownloadblog.com/tag/itunes/>) beta for iTunes Match (<https://www.idownloadblog.com/tag/itunes-match/>) without first thinking about the consequences. No sweat.

If you've since tried to downgrade your iTunes beta back to a publicly released version of iTunes, resulting in the horrible "iTunes Library.itl" cannot be read because it was created by a newer version of iTunes' error message, don't succumb to tears just yet, we've got a fix that might just work.

Save the precious iTunes library that you've spent hours upon hours massaging to perfection, and tune in to the following video tutorial...

[tube]<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=xXKZ2IBNsIA>[/tube]

How to Downgrade iTunes and Save Your iTunes Library

Step 1: Uninstall new version of iTunes, and install previous version.

Step 2: Navigate to your Home folder and go to the Music/iTunes/ primary folder.

Step 3: Locate 'iTunes Library.itl', and rename it to 'iTunes Library.old'.

Step 4: Navigate to the 'Previous iTunes Libraries' folder, and locate the most recent library file, e.g. 'iTunes Library 2011-09-21'. This is the most recent backup of your iTunes library file. [Note: if you've used the new version of iTunes for some time, you may need to use an older backup file. Try the most recent first, and if it doesn't work, try the second most recent, etc.]

Step 5: Copy the most recent backup of your iTunes library file, and paste it in the Music/iTunes primary folder. Next, rename the backup file to 'iTunes Library.itl'.

Step 6: Open iTunes, and your library should be back to normal prior to the iTunes upgrade.

If you're considering downgrading your copy of iTunes, I highly advise you to watch the video to see how simple this is. Always be sure to back up any files you modify.

Was this able to help you? If so, please let me know in the comments section below.

Why are there problems everytime you download a new version of itunes!? Don't the software developers from apple test their software before they put it out for download? Or is it apple saying they dont give a crap about the consumer especially when itunes is free?

Aaye LMAO. MAC vs. PC battle still continues even after those funny ads on tv in the past.

I just bought a replacement iPod and I'm amazed at all the crap a person has to go through to just load the music onto it. I do have an old iTunes folder, but don't give a damn if I import that or simply import music off my laptop. . I'm sure Jobs is in a special place in Hell reserved for Apple designers.

Is this "Fix" in the above video for PC as well as mac? I have the latest version of iTunes but I wanted to downgrade to 12.6.3 to get my apps back on itunes but it didn't work, I tried twice and just get a popup saying that "there is a newer version of itunes on this computer" so it wont install.....

Brian B. → Paris Congress • a year ago

I don't think it's quite that simple but it is pretty simple. What worked for me is skipping Step 1 and completing Steps 2 through 6 above (as written as of 1/23/2018). This logically made sense to me because it is NOT my iTunes version that is too new just the library file that was created when I copied my iTunes folder to an external hard drive and then plugged that in to use on a computer using a newer version of iTunes (i.e. it appears only the library file that was created at that time is unable to be opened by my older version of iTunes).

If I lost you above don't worry. Just follow Steps 2 - 6 above. However, do NOT delete iTunes Library.itl or name it .old (Step 3), just cut and paste outside of your iTunes folder (e.g. save it on your Desktop). This is just for the purpose of backing it up if these steps don't work for you. Then follow the remaining steps. Note that for Step 5 you are pasting the file exactly where you had removed the previous one. This worked for me.

Until recently, I had not used Apple products other than iTunes and an iPod nano for about 30 years, always used Windows/Android -based software. I recently inherited an iPad mini and was excited to use it having heard so much about them. WHAT A DISASTER! It is not at all intuitive. Whoever dreamed up things like shaking your device or vibrating icons should be tarred and feathered, then drawn and quartered, then shot and dumped in boiling oil! I couldn't believe how about every five minutes I had to look up an item for help or paste it in

Music/iTu

folder.

Next,

contact a friend. NOT INTUITIVE! My summary description of using iOS is that it's like using Windows without right-click capability! Total junk to my logical mind. As for iTunes, I'm certain there must be several much better products out there but I feel handcuffed to it having gone through years on the learning curve of frustration. But I'm open to suggestions for migrating to another music management program (one that doesn't try to think for me with nonsense like Genius) if it is easy to migrate my iTunes stuff, easy to use, and cheap, and employs the long proven principle that less is often more.

hkiphone • 2 years ago

Thank you for this lifesaver! I still use a 1st gen iPad Mini for transferring video clips to it via VLC in the iTunes App section, as well as e-comics and ebooks. Without 12.6, I wouldn't have a clue how to do it!

I don't mind progression, but to assume that everyone would copy things over via the app's wifi receiver mode is really backwards. What about releasing an iOS App specifically for backing up and transferring media?!!?

This isn't really a fix. You are just depending on Apple. Needs to be something where you actually convert a "newer" version of the library BACK to the "old" version.

This looks like it might help me but I have a couple other wrinkles. All my music files are in my Previous iTunes Libraries folder. They've been there for quite a while and I have no idea of why, but there they are. Also I have no xml files at all.

If I move the most recent .itl file up into the iTunes folder, will it direct iTunes to the music files in the Previous iTunes Libraries folder? Or should I move all the music files into the iTunes Music folder where they actually belong?

Also, i reinstalled iTunes 10 and launched it, and it created an entire iTunes Library folder with xml and itl files. Should I discard that folder or reinstall iTunes 10?

Thank you so much for the help, I almost got a heart attack when I got the error message. Now it works perfectly! From now on I will try to back up my library if anything happens, but I wonder if I can manually create a new itl file. Just like the ones "Itunes Library 2012-xx-xx.itl" in the "Previous iTunes Libraries" folder. I only managed to make a .xml file of my library but iTunes support says that the .xml file doesn't contain all the information about my library?

That means iTunes would have to reindex everything. I believe this is the safest way, just going by previous experiences. I've tried it your way before, and I had some issues. Either way should technically work, but I believe this will be much easier.
